Taranaki SPOTLIGHT

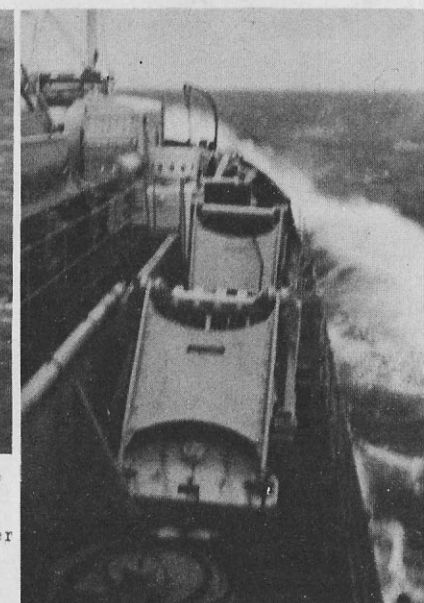

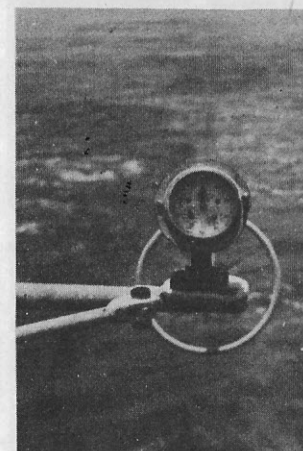

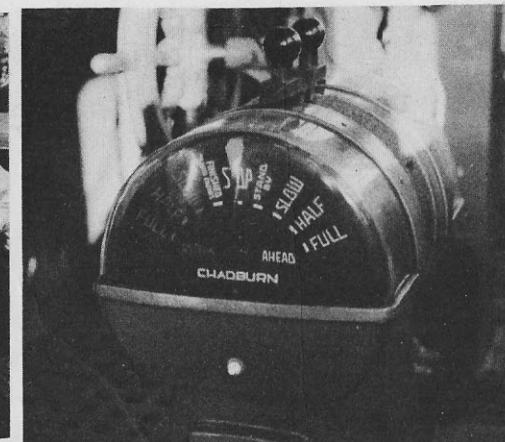

Even a dredge is patriotic. But surely the lifebelt should read "Port Taranaki" and not "Wellington" as the Ngamotu's home port?

CHARTERS & GUTHRIE

Nothing like looking at what you've got, especially if you've spent £400,000 of the ratepayers' money to get it. Members of the Taranaki Harbour Board look at and over the new dredge Ngamotu after her arrival. Left: Harbourmaster Captain John Flett, a very keen photographer is wondering what new angle he can shoot from.

Some of the crew of the new dredge, Ngamotu, which arrived at New Plymouth recently, after sailing from the Clyde, where she was built. Above right: Some of the crew. Right: Stop we're home. Below left: is the log and the rest of the pictures were taken by the bosun, Mr W. Russell and show the ship in heavy seas, and "crossing the line".
